MOTION TO DISMISS FOR FAILURE TO STATE A CLAIM

Defendant Casey Grover files this Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim, and in support, respectfully show the Court as follows:

I.
Summary of Arguments

This case concerns an alleged sex- and labor-trafficking venture purportedly operated by Richard Hubbard (“Richard”) and which allegedly victimized Plaintiffs Julia Hubbard (“Julia”) and Kayla Goedinghaus. Plaintiffs allege that they were forced into the venture where they were verbally, sexually, and physically abused, and compelled to perform sex acts for payment and to secure business relationships for Richard. Plaintiffs identify a large cast of characters as venture members, ranging from various doctors who allegedly drugged Plaintiffs into submission to assorted investors who allegedly financed the venture to a Texas Ranger who allegedly threatened Plaintiffs with arrest on false charges. Plaintiffs’ account has Grover playing a fairly minor role in the venture and only as to Julia as Plaintiffs do not allege any facts suggesting it had involvement with Goedinghaus. According to Plaintiffs’ Complaint, Grover was a manager at the Silver City Cabaret in Dallas when he met Julia in the summery of 2017. Until Julia left Silver City and Grover in October 2017, she alleges Grover used abusive tactics to force her to do as he wished. The only supposed connection from Grover to the venture is Plaintiffs' allegation that Grover was in regular contact with Richard. These allegations are insufficient to support the serious claims of sex- and labor-trafficking and RICO violations against Grover.

Grover now moves to dismiss Plaintiffs' claims against it under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) for the following reasons:

First, Plaintiffs' improper shotgun Complaint with its "everyone-did-everything" approach fails to comply with Rule 8 notice requirements.

Second, Goedinghaus does not allege any facts suggesting Grover had any connection to her (Plaintiffs allege Goedinghaus was first victimized by the alleged sex-trafficking venture over a year after Grover's last alleged act of misconduct), and therefore her claims against him should be dismissed.

Third, the sex-trafficking claims fail as no facts suggest Grover was part of the venture Plaintiffs allege. At best Plaintiffs allege only isolated misconduct by Grover, which does not meet the standard.

Fourth, the labor-trafficking claims fail for lack of any facts plausibly showing Grover's participation in the previously-mentioned venture.

Fifth, Julia's RICO claims are time-barred, having been filed around a year after the four-year deadline.

Finally, the RICO claims fail because no pled facts plausibly show Grover's participation in an enterprise, namely, the aforementioned venture, or even the existence of such an enterprise.

II. Procedural History

On November 1, 2022, Plaintiffs filed this lawsuit against Grover and others in the United States District Court for the Central District of California, based on the facts alleged above, and asserting claims for (1) sex-trafficking; (2) labor-trafficking; and (3) violations of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act. (Doc. 1, Compl. ¶¶ 319-321, 323-325, 327-343.)

On February 23, 2023, Grover filed a Motion to Dismiss under (among other things), Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) (“MTD”). (Doc. 72, Grover’s MTD.)

On May 3, 2023, the California federal court transferred the case to this Court under 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a) and denied Grover’s MTD without prejudice on the basis of mootness due to the transfer, stating, “Defendants may file renewed Motions to Dismiss within thirty (30) days of the acknowledgement of receipt of this action by the Western District of Texas, unless that court orders otherwise.” (Doc. 132, Transfer Ord. at 9.)

III. Allegations Relevant to this Motion¹

In the summer of 2017, several years after the venture’s beginning in 2012 (Doc. 1, Compl. ¶¶ 232, 238, 314, 316, 340), Julia allegedly left Richard and took a job at Silver City Cabaret in Dallas. (Id. ¶¶ 247, 249.) There, Julia met Grover, who was employed as a manager. (Id.) After meeting Julia, Grover supposedly used abusive tactics to “force [Julia] to do as he wished for his financial benefit.” (Id. ¶ 250.) These tactics allegedly included Grover refusing to disburse her wages, threatening to cut her hours or fire her, depriving her of her vehicle and tracking her using her phone. (Id. ¶¶ 250, 252-253.)

¹ Grover generally denies all allegations and insinuations of wrongdoing in the Complaint but treats them as “true” here pursuant to the Rule 12(b)(6) standard for determining this Motion. Their inclusion herein does not in any way indicate Grover accepts them.

Julia alleges she learned that Grover was part of the venture and had been in regular contact with Richard since Julia began working at Silver City, with Richard even contacting Grover's wife. (Id. ¶ 255.) Julia's relationship with Grover apparently ended when he allegedly broke her ribs in October 2017, prompting her to leave him and quit her job at Silver City. (Id. ¶¶ 257-258.)

III. Governing Standards

Motions under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) are governed as follows:

To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Threadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements, do not suffice. Although a complaint does not need detailed factual allegations, the allegations must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level.... [C]onclusory allegations or legal conclusions masquerading as factual conclusions will not suffice to prevent a motion to dismiss.

To survive a Rule 12(b)(6) motion a plaintiff must “state her case with enough clarity to enable a court or opposing party to determine whether or not a claim is alleged.” Elliott v. Foufas, 867 F.2d 877, 880 (5th Cir. 1989). A complaint must include sufficient “factual enhancement” to cross “the line between possibility and plausibility.” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). This standard prevents “a plaintiff with a largely groundless claim” from “tak[ing] up the time of a number of other people, with the right to do so representing an in terrorem increment of settlement value.” Id. at 557-58.

Judging plausibility requires a “context specific” two-step process in which the court “draws on its judicial experience and common sense.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 679 (2009). First, a court “identif[ies] pleadings that, because they are no more than conclusions, are not entitled to the assumption of truth.” Id. Second, the court “assume[s] the ... veracity [of] well pleaded factual allegations [and] determine[s] whether they plausibly give rise to an entitlement to relief.” Id. “Where a complaint pleads facts that are merely consistent with a defendant’s liability, it stops short of the line between possibility and plausibility.” Id. at 678. When considering plausibility, courts must also consider an “obvious alternative explanation” for the defendant’s alleged behavior. Malibu Media LLC v. Duncan, No. 4:19-cv-2314, 2020 WL 567105, at *6 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 4, 2020) (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 567); see also Swierkiewicz v. Sorema, N.A., 534 U.S. 506, 514-15 (2002) (“Rule 8(a) establishes a pleading standard without regard to whether a claim will succeed on the merits ... that is not the test”).

V.

Arguments and Authorities

A. Plaintiffs did not satisfy Rule 8’s notice pleading requirements.

“To form a defense, a defendant must know what he is defending against; that is, he must know the legal wrongs he is alleged to have committed and the factual allegations that form the core of the claims asserted against him. Standard v. Nygren, 658 F.3d 792, 799-800 (7th Cir. 2011). While the allegations in the Complaint are dense, the claims themselves are sparse. The first sentence of each count adopts and realleges all prior paragraphs. (Compl. ¶¶ 318, 322, 326, 336.) And each count is merely a recitation of the elements without specific facts.

The Complaint also heavily relies on “everyone did everything” allegations. (See, e.g., id. ¶ 309 (stating all defendants participated in alleged predicate acts).) The Complaint is not clear on which allegations relate to which defendant for each claim, and even less clear on how Plaintiffs’ claims are connected to any alleged injuries. Because of these failings, the Complaint should be dismissed for noncompliance with Rule 8(a). See Griffin v. HSBC Mortgage Serv., Inc., No. 4:14–CV–00132–DMB–JMV, 2015 WL 4041657, at *5 (N.D. Miss. July 1, 2015) (“[Q]uintessential” shotgun pleadings also fail to distinguish between the actions of named defendants.’ . . . Because Griffin's complaint is a quintessential shotgun pleading, which frustrates the very purpose of Rule 8, it is subject to dismissal pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6).”) (citations omitted); United States v. Lakeway Reg’l Med. Ctr., LLC, No. A-19-CV-00945-JRN, 2020 WL 6146571, at *4 (W.D. Tex. Feb. 13, 2020) (“[T]he Court finds that the ‘shotgun’ pleading style employed by the Government is impermissible under Rule 12(b) . . . If the Government chooses to replead these claims, it ‘should avoid lumping the defendants together and should instead separately allege the scope of any duties owed and conduct alleged to have breached those duties as to each defendant.’”) (citations omitted); Noble Capital Tex. Real Estate Income Fund LP v. Newman, No. 1:22-cv-652, 2023 WL 3035411, at *3 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 13, 2023) (“The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the clear precedent in the Fifth Circuit, and basic notions of fairness and justice require the undersigned to recommend dismissal of the Fund’s claims due to illicit group pleading.”).

B. Goedinghaus does not allege any facts relevant to Grover.

Because Goedinghaus does not allege that Grover had any interactions or connections with her of any kind, and she does not plausibly allege any Grover was part of any larger criminal venture, her claims against him should be dismissed.

Plaintiffs’ shotgun-pleading Complaint alleges that all Defendants are liable on all claims. (Compl. ¶¶ 319-321, 324-325, 327, 337.) However, Plaintiffs do not allege any facts suggesting that Grover ever interacted with, had contact or other involvement with, or even knew of Goedinghaus, let alone acted tortiously toward her. Further, Plaintiffs do not plead any facts plausibly showing membership or participation Grover in the sex-trafficking, labor-trafficking venture posited across the 64-page Complaint, precluding Grover’s liability on an agency, coconspirator, or similar theory. Additionally, the last act of participation by Grover in the supposed venture that Plaintiffs allege occurred in October 2017, over a year before February 2019, when Plaintiffs allege that Goedinghaus was first abused by the venture. (Id. ¶¶ 257, 286.)

The Complaint states that Grover, who supposedly abused Julia and forced her to work at Silver City, was in regular contact with purported venture participant Richard, but this does not plausibly demonstrate participation by Grover in the venture – mere consistency with Plaintiffs’ proffered explanation is not enough. See Bell, 550 U.S. at 557 (“The need at the pleading stage for allegations plausibly suggesting (not merely consistent with) agreement reflects the threshold requirement of Rule 8(a)(2) that the ‘plain statement’ possess enough heft to ‘sho[w] that the pleader is entitled to relief.’”) (emphasis added); BRFFH Shreveport, LLC v. Willis-Knighton Med. Ctr., 49 F.4th 520, 525 (5th Cir. 2022) (“A complaint cannot survive a motion to dismiss by stating facts ‘merely consistent with’ liability.”). Because Plaintiffs do not plead facts supporting any claim by Goedinghaus against Grover, all of Goedinghaus’ claims against him should be dismissed. See Harris on Behalf of DCJH v. Travis, No. 20-680-JWD-RLB, 2021 WL 4025803, at *18 (M.D. La. July 12, 2021) (dismissing, on Rule 12(b)(6) motion, individual-capacity claims against sheriff for alleged unconstitutional fatal shooting where sheriff “is not even alleged to have been at the scene of Mr. Whitfield's shooting”).

C. Julia does not plausibly allege a sex-trafficking claim against Grover.

Julia’s factual allegations do not plausibly state a sex-trafficking claim against Grover, so that claim should be dismissed.

“An individual who is a victim of a violation of this [sex-trafficking] chapter may bring a civil action against the perpetrator (or whoever knowingly benefits, financially or by receiving anything of value from participation in a venture which that person knew or should have known has engaged in an act in violation of this chapter)[.]” 18 U.S.C. § 1595(a). There are two types of liability under § 1595(a), perpetrator and beneficiary. Ratha v. Phatthana Seafood Co., 35 F.4th 1159, 1175 (9th Cir. 2022). Julia pleads both. (Compl. ¶¶ 319-320.)

To prove perpetrator liability, Julia must establish that Grover “(i) knowingly; (ii) in interstate or foreign commerce; (iii) recruit[ed], entic[ed], harbor[ed], transport[ed], provid[ed], obtain[ed], maintain[ed], patronize[d], or solicit[ed] by any means a person; (iv) knowing, or, in reckless disregard of the fact, that means of force, threats of force, fraud or any combination of such means will be used; (v) to cause the person to engage in a commercial sex act.” Doe v. Fitzgerald, No. CV 20-10713-MWF (RAOx), 2022 WL 2784805, at *3 (C.D. Cal. May 13, 2022). To show beneficiary liability, Julia must prove that Grover “(1) knowingly benefitted financially or by receiving anything of value, (2) from participation in a venture, and (3) knew or should have known has engaged in sex trafficking under § 1591.” Harris v. Henry, No. 1:22-cv-00366-LY, 2022 WL 16825200, at *6 (W.D. Tex. Nov. 7, 2022), adopted, 2023 WL 3035423 (Jan. 11, 2023).

Both of Julia’s sex-trafficking theories rest on her allegation that Grover was aware of, recklessly disregarded, or participated in the larger criminal venture that is the central focus of the Complaint, a supposed sex-trafficking, labor-trafficking enterprise masterminded by Richard.

(Compl. ¶¶ 319-320.) However, there are no allegations to plausibly support any such knowledge, disregard, or concerted action by Grover, causing her claim to fail.

“In the absence of direct association with traffickers, Plaintiff must ‘allege at least a showing of a continuous business relationship between the trafficker and [Defendants] such that it would appear that the trafficker and [Defendants] have established a pattern of conduct or could be said to have a tacit agreement.’”). Doe v. Mindgeek USA Inc., 558 F.Supp.3d 828, 837 (C.D. Cal. 2021). The only alleged direct association between Grover and any venture participant unrelated to Silver City is Grover’s supposedly regular contact with Richard. But this shows mere consistency with Julia’s reading of the (alleged) facts; it is not a plausible reading. See BRFFH Shreveport, 49 F.4th at 525 (mere consistency insufficient to survive dismissal motion).

Julia also pleads no facts explaining what Grover and Richard discussed, and she never explains why her reading (that Grover was a venture participant) is a plausible one. See JSW Steel (USA) Inc. v. Nucor Corp., 586 F.Supp.3d 585, 595 (S.D. Tex. 2022) (“When faced with two possible explanations for a defendant’s conduct, only one of which results in liability, a plaintiff cannot offer allegations that are ‘merely consistent with’ their favored explanation but are also consistent with the alternative explanation. ‘[S]omething more’ is needed. The plaintiff must plead facts excluding the possibility that the ‘obvious alternative explanation’ is true, which requires ‘factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.’”) (citations omitted). Her threadbare allegation does not offer a plausible basis to choose her preferred theory from among many other explanations.

With no other direct association allegations, Julia must allege a continuous business relationship between Grover and some other member of the purported venture. Mindgeek, 558

F.Supp.3d at 837. On this score, she fails. Again, her only allegation to support her claim that Grover was part of the putative venture is his remaining in touch with Richard, but this does not plausibly show a continuous business relationship between them, especially given that she provides no details about their alleged communications. In short, Julia has not pled facts showing that Grover knew of, ignored, or participated in a multi-person criminal venture, let alone the sex-trafficking, labor-trafficking enterprise Julia posits. Rather, the alleged facts at best show isolated misconduct. With no venture to buttress her sex-trafficking claim against Grover, that claim should be dismissed. See Noble v. Weinstein, 335 F. Supp. 3d 504, 524 (S.D. N.Y. 2018) (dismissing sex-trafficking claim where complaint was missing “factual allegations that link [defendant’s] actions to” conduct of the alleged venture).

D. Julia does not plausibly allege a labor-trafficking claim against Grover.

The facts pled in the live Complaint does not plausibly state a labor-trafficking claim against Grover, so that claim should be dismissed.

The same statutory provision granting a civil sex-trafficking claim also grants a civil labor-trafficking claim. 18 U.S.C. § 1595(a). As with sex-trafficking, civil liability for labor-trafficking comes in two forms, perpetrator and civil. Perpetrator liability requires a violation of the criminal labor-trafficking statute, while § 1595 governs beneficiary liability. Julia pleads both liability types. (Compl. ¶¶ 323-324.) Her beneficiary theory, which presupposes the existence of a large criminal venture between Grover and others (Id. ¶ 324), is dismissible for the reason discussed above, namely, that Julia has not pled facts plausibly showing that Grover was part of the criminal enterprise or venture she alleges. This leaves her perpetrator theory.

Julia’s perpetrator labor-trafficking claim alleges violations of § 1589(a)(1)-(4). (Id. ¶ 323.) The relevant statutory text reads as follows:

(a) Whoever knowingly provides or obtains the labor or services of a person by any one of, or by any combination of, the following means--

(1) by means of force, threats of force, physical restraint, or threats of physical restraint to that person or another person;

(2) by means of serious harm or threats of serious harm to that person or another person;

(3) by means of the abuse or threatened abuse of law or legal process; or

(4) by means of any scheme, plan, or pattern intended to cause the person to believe that, if that person did not perform such labor or services, that person or another person would suffer serious harm or physical restraint, shall be punished as provided under subsection (d).

§ 1589(a). Julia's Subsection (3) theory is dismissible because Julia does not allege any facts, let alone plausible facts, suggesting or stating that Grover threatened to use the law or the legal process to force her to work. The remaining three theories fail because of Plaintiffs' impermissible shotgun-pleading approach, which alleges that dozens of Defendants, including Grover committed all these violations. Because the Complaint does not give fair notice, these theories are insufficiently pled and proper for dismissal. See Griffin v. HSBC Mortgage Serv., Inc., No. 4:14-CV-00132-DMB-JMV, 2015 WL 4041657, at *5 (N.D. Miss. 2015) (dismissing claims on Rule 12(b)(6) motion for shotgun-pleading defect).

E. Julia's RICO claims are time-barred.

The four-year limitations period on Julia's RICO claims against Grover passed before she filed suit, so those claims should be dismissed.

Civil claims under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act are subject to a four-year limitations period. Rotella v. Wood, 528 U.S. 549, 553 (2000); Rogers v. McDorman, 521 F.3d 381, 387 (5th Cir. 2008). The factual allegations against Grover are limited to the time period starting in “summer 2017,” when Julia took a job at Silver City (Compl. ¶ 249), and ended in October 2017, when she “left [Grover] and quit her job at the Cabaret.” (Id. ¶ 257.) Four years from October 2017 is November 2021 at the latest. Plaintiffs filed their Complaint on November 1, 2022, a year after the November 2021 deadline. Accordingly, Julia’s RICO claims are time-barred and proper for dismissal. See Jones v. Bock, 549 U.S. 199, 215 (2007) (“If the allegations, for example, show that relief is barred by the applicable statute of limitations, the complaint is subject to dismissal for failure to state a claim[.]”).

F. Julia does not plausibly allege a RICO claim against Grover.

The RICO statute sets out four paths to liability; Julia pleads violations of two of them. (Compl. ¶¶ 327, 337.) The first one at issue forbids a person employed by or associated with any enterprise affecting interstate commerce from conducting or participating in the conduct of the enterprise’s affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity. 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c). The second one prohibits conspiring to violate any of the three substantive RICO provisions. § 1962(d).

A claim under § 1962(c) “requires (1) conduct (2) of an enterprise (3) through a pattern (4) of racketeering activity.” Sedima, S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., Inc., 473 U.S. 479, 496 (1985) (footnote omitted). Section 1962(c) requires that the defendant be employed by other associated with an “enterprise.” § 1962(c); see Cedric Kushner Promotions, Ltd. v. King, 533 U.S. 158, 161 (2001) (§ 1962(c) liability requires an enterprise). An enterprise includes “any union or group of individuals associated in fact although not a legal entity[.]” § 1961(4). Julia alleges an association-in-fact enterprise. (Compl. ¶¶ 329, 339.) “The ‘enterprise’ is not the ‘pattern of racketeering activity’; it is an entity separate and apart from the pattern of activity in which it engages.” United States v. Turkette, 452 U.S. 576, 583 (1981); see Manax v. McNamara, 842

F.2d 808, 811 (5th Cir. 1988) (“[A]n enterprise must be an entity separate and apart from the pattern of racketeering activity in which it engages.”).

“[A]n ‘association-in-fact enterprise 1) must have an existence separate and apart from the pattern of racketeering, 2) must be an ongoing organization and 3) its members must function as a continuing unit as shown by a hierarchical or consensual decision making structure.’” Crowe v. Henry, 43 F.3d 198, 205 (5th Cir. 1995).

Regarding her § 1962(c) claim, Julia contends that the relevant “enterprise” is the alleged network among all of the Defendants to this lawsuit to, among other things, engage in sex-trafficking and labor-trafficking of the Plaintiffs. (Compl. ¶¶ 329-333.) However, except for its statement that Grover communicated with Richard, the Complaint contains no facts suggesting that Grover was involved with the criminal venture Julia alleges. Julia even pleads facts in conflict with the alleged enterprise – for example, when she says that Grover forced her to work, she notes that this was for Grover’s financial benefit, not the venture’s. (Id. ¶ 250.) Julia allege a long-running story of domestic abuse and drug addiction as between themselves and their domestic partners, which they attempt to transform into RICO claims against others with whom they socially intersected. Cf. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557-58. Julia strains to include as many defendants and as much conduct as possible, but even then, Grover and the other Defendants come and go without any factual allegations that plausibly connect them, or their conduct, to the supposed Enterprise—the gravamen of a RICO claim.

The Complaint does not plausibly allege a common purpose shared by all Defendants. Rather, it alleges that the purposes of the supposed criminal enterprise were “to traffic women for purposes of sexual acts and forced labor, to the financial benefit of [Richard], Eller, and the Medical Doctor Defendants and for the sexual gratification and other benefits of all Defendants.”

(Compl. ¶ 341.) The facts alleged do not plausibly show any “common purpose and course of conduct” among the Defendants; instead, the allegations are that each Defendant acted with distinct purposes, interests, and goals. See Boyle v. United States, 556 U.S. 938, 950 (2009).

For example: the medical doctors prescribed drugs to Plaintiffs for their own pecuniary gain, not to traffic Plaintiffs (Compl. ¶ 146); Hynes Jr. is an alleged drug dealer who had Ms. Hubbard sell drugs for his own financial gain (Id. ¶ 269); there is no indication what purpose Mitchell had for “fixing” unidentified “problems” (Id. ¶ 160); and the goal of the so-called “Investor Defendants” was allegedly to receive “sex and media of naked women or individuals engaged in sex acts.” (Id. ¶ 39.) Richard’s purpose was allegedly to force Plaintiffs and others to “perform sex acts for payment, which payments he retained, and to secure business relationships.” (Id. ¶ 3.) And according to Plaintiffs, Grover’s goal was to withhold for his own benefit Julia’s wages at a gentleman’s club (Id. ¶ 250). The Complaint’s conclusory attempt to align Defendants’ goals cannot change the fact that their interests point in different directions. There is no plausible “unified agenda” pled. See Labaty v. UWT, Inc., 121 F. Supp. 3d 721, 752-753 (W.D. Tex. 2015); see Comm. to Protect Our Agric. Water v. Occidental Oil, 235 F. Supp. 3d 1132, 1175 (E.D. Cal. 2017) (failure to plead a RICO enterprise where plaintiffs “allege[d] only a series of disconnected incidents, each involving a subset of the overall group of defendants, with no clear indication of a unified agenda”); Baker v. IBP, Inc., 357 F.3d 685, 691 (7th Cir. 2004) (“divergent goals” among defendants insufficient to allege a RICO enterprise).

The allegations alleged here show only that Grover was conducting his own affairs, not that he was participating in or conducting the affairs of the enterprise Julia alleges. See Reves v. Ernst & Young, 507 U.S. 170, 185 (1993) (“[L]iability [under § 1962(c)] depends on showing that the defendants conducted or participated in the conduct of the “enterprise's affairs,” not just their own affairs.”); Kariem v. United Parcel Serv., Inc., No. 3:05-CV-2079-P, 2006 WL 8437577, at *3-4 (N.D. Tex. Sept. 18, 2006) (dismissing RICO claims on Rule 12(b)(6) motion because, among other things, “Plaintiff fails to point to any facts that indicate that . . . Defendants were an ongoing organization. The complaint does not even hint at facts that would show the enterprise had a hierarchical or consensual decision making structure. Without establishing an enterprise, Plaintiff has no grounds for recovery under a RICO claim.”) And as discussed, the alleged communications between Grover and Richard does not plausibly support a determination that Grover was a participant in the venture Julia alleges, particularly since she provides no details about the substance of those communications.

Plaintiffs also do not adequately allege that Defendants had sufficient relationships, i.e., they do not allege any organization or coordinated activities as a continuing unit. Taking the Complaint at face value, the alleged participants in the “Enterprise” that somehow sprung from the supposed sex trafficking “Venture” never planned anything, worked together to obtain a common end, split profits, or even knew who each other were in most cases. See Labaty, 121 F. Supp. 3d at 753 (no enterprise where there were no facts indicating that individual defendants together planned, discussed roles, or coordinated efforts. According to the Complaint, after Defendants Eller and Richard began the so-called “Venture,” a “racketeering enterprise” simply arose out it. (Id. ¶ 6.) “Crime and misconduct” were admittedly part of Plaintiffs’ lives long before the events alleged in the Complaint, but that allegation hurts, not helps, their RICO claim. (Compare Compl. ¶¶ 160, 280, with Occidental Oil, 235 F. Supp. 3d at 1175 (no RICO enterprise based on disconnected incidents among subgroups)); see Boyle, 556 U.S. at 947 n.4 (un-orchestrated pattern of crime is insufficient to show RICO enterprise).

Instead of establishing a plausible unified criminal enterprise, the Complaint describes long-running, serial domestic disputes between Plaintiffs and their domestic partners, with occasional cameos by other defendants. Plaintiffs do not allege facts sufficient to plausibly establish the “organization” and “continuing unit” requirements for stating a RICO claim. See Boyle, 556 U.S. at 947 n.4 (“It is easy to envision situations in which proof that individuals engaged in a pattern of racketeering activity would not establish the existence of an enterprise. For example, suppose that several individuals, independently and without coordination, engaged in a pattern of crimes listed as RICO predicates—for example, bribery or extortion. Proof of these patterns would not be enough to show that the individuals were members of an enterprise.”); see also Do v. Pilgrim’s Pride Corp., 512 F. Supp. 2d 764, 768 (E.D. Tex. 2007) (“[T]he enterprise must continue to have this same purpose, and the new member must perform the same roles as the old did”); Stitt v. Citibank, N.A., 942 F. Supp. 2d 944, 957 (N.D. Cal. 2013) (dismissal required where plaintiff fails to make “factual allegations to detail [defendant’s] involvement or make [his] involvement in the enterprise plausible”).

A claim under § 1962(c) also requires a showing that the defendant conducts or participates in the conduct of the enterprise's affairs. See Reves, 507 U.S. at 185 (“[W]e hold that ‘to conduct or participate, directly or indirectly, in the conduct of such enterprise's affairs,’ § 1962(c), one must participate in the operation or management of the enterprise itself.”). Julia’s § 1962(c) claims fail because taking her alleged facts as true, they show at best only isolated misconduct by Grover, not that he was part of the enterprise Julia hypothesizes.

Julia also does not adequately state a conspiracy-based RICO claim. § 1962(d). A § 1962(d) claim fails automatically if the plaintiff has no claim under one of the other substantive provisions of § 1962 (i.e., under Subsections (a)-(c)). See N. Cypress Med. Ctr. Operating Co., Ltd. v. Cigna Healthcare, 781 F.3d 182, 203 (5th Cir. 2015) (“Since North Cypress failed to properly plead a claim under §§ 1962(a), (b), or (c), it correspondingly failed to properly plead a claim under § 1962(d).”); Allstate Ins. Co. v. Benhamou, 190 F.Supp.3d 631, 663 (S.D. Tex. June 2, 2016) (“Because Plaintiffs’ § 1962(c) claims against Sanderson fail as a result, their § 1962(d) claims fail as a matter of law.”). Because Julia has no valid substantive RICO claim against Grover, her conspiracy-based RICO claim fails as well. Additionally, the conspiracy theory fails on the merits. “A [RICO] conspirator must at least know of the conspiracy and ‘adopt the goal of furthering or facilitating the criminal endeavor.’” Chaney v. Dreyfus Serv. Corp., 595 F.3d 219, 239 (5th Cir. 2010). For the reasons already explained, Julia does not plead facts plausibly showing that Grover was part of the alleged enterprise referenced in the Complaint. The conspiracy theory should be dismissed accordingly.

In addition, Julia also does not adequately allege RICO standing. To establish RICO standing, Julia must allege a “concrete financial loss” to business or property and show that the RICO violation was both “proximate and but-for” causation of the alleged harm. See Holmes v. Sec. Inv’r Prot. Corp., 503 U.S. 258, 268 (1992); HCB Fin. Corp. v. McPherson, 8 F.4th 335, 344 (5th Cir. 2021). When evaluating proximate cause, the question is whether the alleged violation led directly to the plaintiff’s injuries. Anza v. Ideal Steel Supply Corp., 547 U.S. 451, 461 (2006). The injury must be caused by “an overt act” of racketeering or conduct “otherwise wrongful under RICO.” Beck v. Prupis, 529 U.S. 494, 505 (2000).

Julia’s alleged RICO injuries are (1) lost money that she earned for sexual acts at swinger parties, and (2) “physical and emotional injury.” (Compl. ¶¶ 312, 335, 343.) She separately alleges additional injuries for the repossession of her home and confiscation of wages by Grover for his own benefit. (Id. ¶¶ 45, 265.) None of these alleged injuries establish RICO standing.

Conclusory allegations that Defendants “damaged” Julia or “caused physical and emotional injury” are insufficient. See Berg v. First State Ins. Co., 915 F.2d 460, 463-64 (9th Cir. 1990); see Price v. Pinnacle Brands, Inc., 138 F.3d 602, 607 n.20 (5th Cir. 1998) (personal injuries, including emotional distress, that result in pecuniary losses, are not compensable under RICO). Also, money earned at parties in exchange for sexual acts (i.e., for illegal prostitution) is not recoverable under RICO. See Shulman v. Kaplan, No. 2:19-cv-5413, 2020 WL 7094063, at *2 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 29, 2020) (injuries to illegal businesses are not redressable under RICO); Tex. Penal Code § 43.02 (illegal to receive a fee to engage in sexual conduct).

Additionally, no allegations sufficiently connect the loss of Julia’s home or Grover’s supposed wage garnishment to the purported RICO conduct. Rather, the Complaint asserts that Grover kept her wages “for his own benefit”—not for the so-called enterprise. (Compl. ¶ 45.) Julia alleges her home’s repossession was caused by “her heavily strained financial situation.” (Id. ¶ 265.) There are numerous alternative reasons for “her heavily strained financial situation” and foreclosure, such as her ongoing domestic issues with Richard, Grover and Hynes, Jr., or a simple failure to pay her mortgage. See Williams v. Steward Health Care Sys., LLC, No. 5:20-cv-123, 2022 WL 575939, *14 n.4 (E.D. Tex. 2022) (plaintiff must show injury is directly attributable to RICO violation as opposed to other factors); Twombly, 550 U.S. at 565 (when considering plausibility, courts must also consider an obvious alternative explanation). The Complaint fails to proximately connect the alleged conduct to a cognizable RICO injury. See Holmes, 503 U.S. at 268.

VI. Prayer

In light of the foregoing, Defendant Casey Grover respectfully prays that the Court: (1) grant this Motion Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim; (2) dismiss with prejudice all claims against Grover by Plaintiffs Julia Hubbard and Kayla Goedinghaus; and (3) award Grover his costs of court from Plaintiffs; and (4) grant Grover all other proper relief.

Respectfully submitted,
